Malignant pleural effusions are the result of a diverse array of primary and secondary pleural-associated diseases. In a subset of cases the effusions are associated with the metabolic syndrome and are referred to as "malignant effusions of unknown origin". Effusions have been reported in which there was an excess of metabolically active cells and a relative paucity of specific protein markers suggestive of the primary aetiology of the effusion. It has been previously shown that the induction and/or activity of the effusion-associated alkaline phosphatase and gamma-glutamyltransferase can be reproduced in vitro by dialysed, pronase-treated effusions. Here we show that the induction of enzymatic sulfate depletion by effusions can be reproduced by dialysed, pronase-treated effusions, and is associated with a decrease in the ability of the effusion to replete sulfate from exogenous sources. We have also performed metabolic studies on preparations of effusions from patients with malignant pleural effusions of unknown origin to determine if such

Triton 3D Game Engine.Q: Which word(s) can represent a suggested edit? I just came across an edit that was approved by a community manager on Stack Overflow but I am not certain what kind of edit it was. I think it was a suggested edit, but I am not certain which word(s) I should use to search for it. A: A suggestion is made by any user, whether it has the ability to approve them or not. An edit (or edit suggestion) is just that. It is an edit that you made (or someone else did on your behalf). A suggestion is just the proposal for it. Each review queue has a queue that is linked to a specific tag.

On each review page, you should see a section with the following information, the section being either: Pending Approved Rejected Closed Review needed Skip (aka won't vote on this item) A review is any action performed by a user while they are browsing the review queue (their specific queue that they are reviewing in). This includes both suggestions (making a new suggestion), edits (making an edit to a post), and close votes (making a close vote), among other things. Each review is taken place on a different activity on the post, generally the "Taken" action, but there are cases where it is done on other actions too, such as voting. For example, here on Stack Overflow, the below is all the review actions on a certain post (click to enlarge): A: These are all possible: The review queues include: There are on-site queues for "spam and offensive" which include: There are
