Field of the Invention The invention relates to a method of controlling a nanofluid evaporating pump and a nanofluid evaporating pump, and more particularly to a method of controlling an output of a nanofluid evaporating pump and a nanofluid evaporating pump. 2. Description of the Related Art With the development of micro and nano technologies, the heat transferring efficiency and the heat transfer coefficient of a heat transfer medium have reached a micron level. Therefore, the efficiency of the heat transferring medium is required to be enhanced to improve the performance of heat transfer. The heat transfer medium that is applied in a conventional cooling heat exchanger, such as one used in a heating, ventilation and air conditioning (HVAC) system, has a low heat transfer coefficient as compared with a cooling medium used in a heat source, such as an electronic engine or a solar cell. Therefore, a heat transfer medium with a larger heat transfer coefficient has been developed. A common heat transfer medium is a phase change material. In recent years, with the further development of the phase change material, the
