Codenames is a one of a kind word game that allows you to send players codenames you create. You will be sent these codenames and you need to guess what they mean. Because Codenames is a word game, you can use any word you know to create your own codenames. For example, if you know the words Republican and Democrat, you can use their codenames as: GOPEUKANDPC and DPCCKOP ANDPCK, respectively. There is a simple guide on how to create codenames in the game. This guide is also included in the game and you should use it to create your own codenames. You can also check some examples on the various codenames you can create in the game. The guide suggests that you should avoid codenames that can be used to insult others. For example, using the codename of a president (POTUS) or a prime minister (PM) can be a good idea. Avoid using codenames that are stupid (for example, a codename of something that starts with an A can be taken as an insult. Try to avoid naming the game of cards that starts with A and involves dealing cards one by one. The game of bridge is different and it starts with the words A to Z. Once you've installed this, the registration panel will appear upon logging in. For those who weren't aware, this extension implements an interface similar to the one you use on Youtube. What you may have missed, is that the interface is dead simple to use. All you need to do is make sure that your YouTube channel is accessible to all of your viewers, and enable the extension. Users should then be able to click 'new comment' or something similar, to get redirected to the extension, where it will stay until you choose to disable it. The only other function that can be made available is clicking 'report', which may allow you to submit videos that are reported as spam or otherwise marked as offensive. The extension has been made in such a way that it shouldn't be impossible to make it do more, but as it stands, it's good enough. Since this extension is a direct competitor for, and basically a ripoff of Youtube, you might want to check out the original if you're looking for a more polished, versatile extension. On the downside, this extension is still in its infancy, as most of its functionality is reserved for video sharing. Although this is being actively worked on, it's still a new extension and a lot of functionality is going to be missing when it is finally complete, so its best to stick with this one for now, unless you have a bunch of money.
